

What is a genuine 540?

The genuine "540" is a Mabuchi RS-540, which is manufactured for a variety of voltages (commonly used in portable power tools). Tamiya used one version in their R/C cars, which has made it very popular. Graupner call it a "Speed 500 7.2V". Many clones are available. Most are re-badged or un-branded, and their specs are not known.

What happens if you put a 11.1v battery in a motor?

It changes the voltage and that in turn changes the current. On a plane if you put in an 11.1V battery where there used to be a 7.4v battery then the current (amps) would roughly double. It would be very unlikely that the motor would be able to cope with that increase in current and power and it would probably burn out.
